

How the Chris-Craft model 118 got its name.

James Fenimore Cooper's novel the last of the Mohicans told the story of chief chingachgook pronounced (CHING-GATCH-GOOK ) and his association with the British in 1757. We also learned about the tragic demise of the Mohawk tribe and the Chief's son Uncas who held the title of the last of the Mohicans. Now this Chris-Craft model 118 holds the title as the only one ever built then the name Uncas seems fitting as the last of its kind. MORE TO COME ABOUT UNCAS AND ITS INCREDIBLE PAST SINCE IT LEFT THE CHRIS CRAFT FACTORY IN 1930 AND HOW IT CAME TO ME TO BE RESTORED.
